Barium Film In Great Demand

The five copies of "When The Bough Breaks," a 16-mm film in sound and color, have been traveling over the Synod of North Carolina this fall. More than fifty churches have shown this and everyone has been delighted with the film and expressed the pleasure of the group in having had it. In addition to the showing in the local churches, two TV stations have run it, one in Charlotte and one in Durham. All have agreed that this film in sound and color tells the story of Barium Springs beautifully. The boys and girls of the Home helped in selecting the material that they thought was typically Barium and took great pleasure in having a part in making it.

This film can be booked for a showing in your church by sending a request to the office at Barium Springs.

COTTAGE NEWS

Rumple Hall News

Hi Friends,

Here we are back again with news from our cottage. On Halloween we had a double treat. Our housemother had a surprise party for us, and then we went "trick or treating." Since Halloween was on Wednesday we celebrated it on Friday so that it would not interfere with the church service.

Basketball practice has started and we have four girls trying out for a suit. The Girls' Sextette of the Glee Club were fortunate in having the opportunity to go to Raleigh. Or, were they fortunate? They had to put on a program there. Two of our girls, Faye Hicks and Helen Spencer, were in that group.

Well, it's the Bean Stringers again. The Thanksgiving Holidays are about over now, but we really enjoyed our rest from school. We had a wonderful Thanksgiving dinner with all the trimmings.

We have written our Christmas letters. We have great hopes so let's hope we don't get disappointed.

Guess who has a birthday this month? None other than Elva Medlin. We wonder what will happen to her on her birthday.

Well, there is not much news, so bye for now.

CHRISTMAS PLANS MADE FOR BIG FAMILY

Since the writing of the Santa Claus letters in late November, the Christmas spirit has been in the air on the campus. Every day is filled so full of activities that it seems impossible to get all of the good things done.

On Thursday, December 13th, the first through the seventh grades are invited to Davidson for the annual Christmas party. This is one of the highlights of the year for the boys and girls and is a thrilling experience for everyone who visits with the college boys.

Family night with the decorating and lighting of the big tree in the dining-room marks the beginning of the Christmas week. It is at this time that the entire Barium family gathers for supper in the large dining-room. When the meal has been concluded, the group, in the candlelight, and singing carols, put their gifts in the big red stockings and then hang a piece of decoration on the tree. This gift of money is sent to some person who has been chosen by the group to receive their Christmas gift. Following this, trees are placed in the cottages and the services are held on the campus. The Senior High Fellowship, together with the choir of the Church, will present the Christmas pageant on Sunday, December 23rd, and then comes Christmas Day. The big bell will awaken everybody early on Christmas morning, and while it is still dark they will make their way from the cottages to the Church, as the Christmas carols come peeling forth from the tower of the Church. The service of worship and praise will take place in the sanctuary. After that a Christmas breakfast will be served in the dining-room with everybody together.

After breakfast, each cottage will have its own Christmas tree with everybody receiving the gifts which are under the tree as the result of the Santa Claus letters and gifts of friends and loved ones. The late morning will be given over to Open House so that brothers and sisters and friends may visit with others to see what Santa Claus has brought and what Christmas presents have been received. And then comes the Christmas dinner with all the trimmings that have been furnished by folks who provide for the Home at Christmastime—home made cakes, candy, nuts, fruits, and good things of all sorts.

It is a glorious season and back of it lies the fact that there is in the hearts of people genuine goodness and back of that the goodness of God.

Broten Conducts Training Program For Housemothers

A longed hoped for day became a reality on the campus when the first in-service training program was held in the last week of November. From Monday through Friday, Mr. Broten met with the houseparents and visited the cottages as he led them in discussion pertaining to the work in the Home.

Mr. Alton M. Broten has been secured for the particular purpose of carrying on this in-service training program in the Southeastern Conference. This Conference, in conjunction with the School of Social Work at the University of North Carolina, has begun this three-year project which it hopes will develop into a real in-service training program on campuses and provide also summer instruction at Chapel Hill in workshops. The work of the child care project, under the direction of Dr. Alan Keith-Lucas will be made available through Mr. Broten to the various Homes participating and great hopes are held for this particular service in the Southeastern Conference.

FROM LITTLE JOE'S CHURCH

REV. ROBERT R. COLLINS, Minister

This issue of the Barium Messenger will come to you at a time when final preparations are being made for Christmas. Gifts for loved ones are being selected and there is an air of anticipation as you look forward to sharing with those whom you love, the joys of this season.

And is not this the true meaning of Christmas? The sharing with those whom He loved, Joy! "For God so loved the world that he gave his only Son . . ." Nothing that has ever happened since the beginning of time has done more for men than the coming of Christ, God's Son. Christmas is the celebration of His birth, and more! It is a time for renewing our awareness of His presence, the presence of the living Christ who has been with us throughout the days of the year now gone. Did not the prophet declare, "Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and his name shall be called Emmanuel" (which means, God with us)."

Christmastime is much more than the exchanging of a few gifts with those whom we love. It is remembering the gift of God, Jesus of Nazareth, and offering gratitude for the salvation which He brought to all mankind. It is renewing our devotion to Him "who first loved us" by acts of love and mercy toward those who are lost, lonely, and destitute of the physical and spiritual needs of life. As Paul declares in Romans, "But God shows his love for us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." If we are to maintain the true spirit of the child whose birth we remember it seems necessary that we share His concern for the hearts and souls of all men everywhere.

Christmas then is no time for prejudice and the littleness which too often separate us from our fellowman. Rather, it is recognizing that the birth of Christ was God's way of bringing His family together in the harmony and love which He intended from the beginning. When we come to realize this and seek to bring all nations to the cradle of the Christ, then we shall understand anew the message sung by the angels that first Christmas night when they said:

"Glory to God in the highest,
And on earth peace,
good will among men."

While it is too early to know what the Thanksgiving Offering is, it is not too early to say "Thank You" to all those who have remembered Barium. After the Church Year has been closed and the full reports are made, the business office will then know whether or not the goal for 1956 has been reached.

TWO SENIORS SPEAK:

MY LIFE AT BARIUM

By ADDIE MCEWEN

Late one September afternoon a car arrived from down in the eastern part of the State and deposited a little seven-year old girl, a brother, and two younger sisters at Barium Springs. We spent our first night down at the infirmary wishing very much to be back home in our own beds. But this is only one of my recollections as I look back on my life at Barium. I was soon moved over to Annie Louise Cottage where I learned to sweep the front porch which looked enormous to me at that time. To look at it now you would think that it had shrunk considerably. Along with the work, we had a lot of fun playing. Who could fail to be content with twenty-four playmates?

Three years later I was moved to Howard Cottage. At that time our main job was to string beans and to keep the house clean. Rumble Hall is a cottage I like to remember because of all the fun we had over there. Now that we had grown older, we were expected to do more work, such as working in the dining room, washing dishes, setting tables, cleaning up after the meals, and serving the food.

A year later I was chosen with another girl about my age to move to the Baby Cottage to help take care of the small children under six years old. I enjoyed this work very much. We were kept busy during the day trying to keep up with the little children and taking care of them, but the thing we liked best about the job was that our evenings were free, as the children went to bed early, and we had a chance to do some of the things we liked to do. Two years later came the experience which I had looked forward to—moving over to the Woman's Building where there were about twenty-four girls of my own age. Every month we were assigned a different job such as working in the sewing room, kitchen, laundry, or taking care of the dormitory. These were all new experiences to me and ones which I thoroughly enjoyed because I was among girls of my own age. About a year ago two new cottages were built on our campus. They are different from most of our older buildings which were two or three stories high. The new buildings are all on the ground floor and are more home-like. One of these buildings is Sanford Cottage where I now live. We have girls of mixed ages from pre-school children to seniors in high school.

I am one of the seniors this year. I have the duty of helping take care of the children at our cottage when the house-

In July, 1953, my seven brothers and sisters and I, the largest group from one family ever to enter the Home, came to Barium Springs. One thing bothered me a little right at first: how was I going to fit into this group? This was a different world compared to the one I came from. I felt as if all hope for a happy life was lost.

But, I soon found that I did not have to be homesick or to feel sorry for myself — not with all the things I had to do: a regular job with the orchard group, and such recreational activities as swimming, skating, and various kinds of ball in association with my many new and interesting friends.

When I came to Barium I was assigned to the Quads where the high school boys lived. The campus was too big and overwhelming for me. I couldn't seem to remember which building my room was in, or where the dining-hall was, so instead of taking a chance on getting lost, I spent most of my leisure time following my roommate everywhere he went and doing everything he did until I knew my way around the campus.

At Barium Springs everyone has a job to do. My jobs have been spraying the trees, picking apples and peaches, canning the fruit and vegetables, grading apples, and putting them in cold storage, and keeping the orchard and the orchard equipment in good shape. Except for working on the house cleaning group for three months, I did this orchard work for three years, from the time I came to Barium until school started this year. On the house-cleaning group it was my job to help keep the Quad buildings clean. At Barium they are trying to give more of the students extra jobs to help them earn some spending money. My extra job is working in the campus Snack Bar on Saturdays.

When school started this year I acquired the position of assistant to the dietician. At this position my chief jobs are to scrub pots and pans and keep the kitchen clean. I get up at six o'clock in the morning and help prepare breakfast, and then after the kitchen is spic and span my work for the day is over.

In the afternoon after school is out we have football or basketball practice, and in the spring a softball game on Friday. Football is my favorite sport and I have been on the varsity football team for the last two years.

At Barium a great deal of the life centers in the school. With the exception of the ninth and tenth grades which are attending school at Troutman, we have our own school on the campus. We have very good teachers and the advan-

I was made Vice-president of this Club for this school year. I also am on the Glee Club and served as a marshall at commencement last year.

The Church is an ever present factor in everyone's life at Barium. Besides the regular church services on Sundays and Wednesday nights, we have the Pioneer and Senior High Fellowships for the young people. I am the Program Chairman of the Senior High Fellowship and serve as an usher in the church. This year I finally did something that I have been wanting to do for a long time. I memorized and recited the Shorter Catechism and received an award for it in the church.

I am a senior this year and in a few short months I will go to college or to the Armed Forces, and will eventually take my lifetime place in the world. When I graduate my total number of years at Barium will be a little less than four, but I shall always remember the good times I have had here. A few experiences which I especially enjoyed are the Beta Club Conference at Asheville, the annual Shrine Bowl Football game at Charlotte, the Church Conferences at Camp Grier, and the football and basketball banquets. I'll never forget the friends I have made here, and the training and education I have received at Barium has been a most important influence in my life.

Minimum Standards For Child Caring Institutions

I. Statement of Philosophy

Every child has a basic right to grow up in his own family group and every family to rear its own child. The family group to which a child belongs can never be fully replaced by any substitute. When circumstances deprive a child of his family and he cannot be placed with relatives, society has provided several alternatives—adoption, foster family care, and institutional or group care placement. It is a major responsibility of agencies offering service to children to select the type of placement which most nearly meets the individual child's needs. The selection of appropriate care for children away from their own families depends on the relationship of several factors operating at the same time, such as the developmental needs of the child, preference of the parents, behavior and defenses of the child, nature and quality of case work service that will be available, etc. Also situations change with time, so frequent reviews of the situation are needed and new plans must be made when these changes so indicate. Economic deprivation in a family situation is not in itself sufficient reason to consider placement of children. As a general policy, children of pre-school age should not be in group care since these children, especially, still need the closeness of a direct personal tie with a mother and father even though they may be substitute parents.

Some children of school age for whom institutional or group care may offer a helpful experience are:

1. Children who have parents or relatives unable to care for them and yet so concerned by their failure as parents that they cannot agree to let their children have from a foster family the affection and security which they cannot provide themselves. These parents often can accept an institutional placement for their children until with help they achieve an understanding of their problem and what is best indicated for their child.

2. Children who have parents or relatives who love them but who are unable temporarily to care for them for a variety of reasons. These parents often can accept an institutional placement until they can again assume full responsibility for their children, when they cannot accept foster family care.

3. Children who have been so hurt by rejecting parents and disrupting family experiences that they cannot be receptive and responsive to foster parents and family living until after a period of understanding care and treatment in the less personal setting which group care offers.

4. Children who present aggressive behavior patterns which foster families generally cannot deal with, but who may adjust well in group care. This group includes for the most part adolescent children who are in conflict concerning child-parent relationships and their struggle for emotional independence. The give and take relationship with other children in a group setting, the less personal relationship with adults, and the group acceptance of sensible limits often ease the tension causing the aggressive behavior.

5. Children in need of temporary observation and study for diagnostic purposes where suitable foster homes during the study period are not available.

6. Children in need of specialized treatment where small, well staffed group care facilities with appropriate case-work, medical, and psychiatric services can offer help.

The existence of a child caring institution in North Carolina is justified when it provides care for children whose needs can best be met by group care and when already available facilities have proved inadequate to meet the need. Such a service should complement and supplement other child care programs as part of a comprehensive social welfare program for children.

Those persons actively interested in the establishment of a child caring institution should first completely and carefully study the need for such a service in order to determine whether they would make the most valuable contribution to children by such an institution or by undertaking some other welfare activity. A conscientious inquiry of this type may reveal that other programs such as public assistance, foster home care, or family service will more adequately achieve the desired results for children without the much greater expenditure necessary to build and maintain an institution.

Since the basic purpose of the child caring institution, as well as all other child care programs, is service to children, the child caring facilities must keep abreast of new knowledge in the field of personality development and be prepared to meet the new concepts of care. The facility must keep a sound perspective regarding its place in the community. An institution which isolates itself from the community, either physically or by attitudes, cannot effectively achieve its purpose in providing a well rounded and integrated experience for the children it serves. It is equally difficult for staff to maintain varied interests and to participate in civic and cultural activities in an in-grown and limited atmosphere.

With the extensive development of licensed foster homes the children, institutions have increased opportunity to develop programs which will offer much needed specialized care for properly selected groups of children. Group care facilities should, with the State supervising agency, initiate periodic re-evaluations of their programs and purpose. In this manner their current usefulness and programs may be weighed with other resources to determine how they can best meet long time goals in child care.

The State Board of Public Welfare after careful deliberation with the Advisory Committee of the North Carolina Orphanage Association has established the following minimum standards to be met by child caring institutions. It is recognized that minimum standards alone can in no wise adequately measure the intrinsic values of an agency's program. These values will be found in the happiness, mental health, and moral character of each child under care. Minimum standards as here established provide a framework within which these intrinsic values can more easily be attained.

My home at Barium has been a happy one. Even though it can never be quite the same as a real family life in love and affection, what it lacks in this way it makes up in the training and broad experience which it gives to those of us who have made it our home.

After a welcome to the guests was extended, the nearly 200 folks present enjoyed a bountiful steak dinner with all the trimmings, topped off with pie and ice cream. Infirmary News

Hi Everyone,

Although we had two patients at our house, we still had a wonderful Thanksgiving Day and a good dinner with all the trimmings.

Two new faces have been seen a lot around the Infirmary in the past weeks—Tommy Joyner and Jerome Ruff are our new house boys.

Last Friday night the Senior High Fellowship had a combination square dance and scavenger hunt. About 9:30 we all went to the church to thaw out and eat doughnuts and drink tea. Although we were cold we did have a good time, and we hope that our friends from Troutman who came had an equally good time.

As we close we are looking forward to our first basketball game in December. We are all hoping for a victory.

So, until next time,
